From the President

Dear Flute Society Members,

The Flute Society of SA committee has been planning a busy set of activities, which we hope will appeal to our members. To start the year’s events, Linda Pirie has offered to co-ordinate a performance afternoon called ‘Tutti Fluting’ for any flute player of any level to simply come along and play in a relaxed atmosphere. Her idea was a stroke of genius as the event on May 15 at 2pm at Rosefield Uniting Church is full to the seams. It will definitely be an event which will be repeated in the future so get in early next time!

A beautiful set piece has been chosen by the Carolyn White Memorial Scholarship committee. It is Siesta from Richard Rodney Bennett’s Summer Music and should entice all young players 15 years and under to enter the competition. This will be held on June 18 at the Colonel Light Gardens Uniting Church, Daw Park.

I would like to congratulate one of our committee members, Masako Kondo, and her husband Grant, on the arrival of their beautiful son, Thomas Edward Packer, born on March 17. When I first visited Thomas, he was happily asleep with Dvorak’s Symphony No 8 playing in the background!

Since my last report, I, along with my six students, have returned from a wonderful study trip to London and Paris. Helen Seppelt has written a report of our activities for the newsletter and from her perspective and that of the other students, it is clear that such a trip has been life changing. From my perspective as organiser and their teacher, such a project was worth every minute spent in the preparation process. It was incredibly exciting being in London and Paris at that time of the year. Despite it being cold, London in particular simply buzzed with so much musical activity. My Head of Woodwind counterpart at the Royal College of Music, Simon Channing, made us all so welcome, not only giving us a class on orchestral excerpts, but inviting us to observe a Sir James Galway class and an orchestral class tutored by members of the London Symphony Orchestra. We heard William Bennett in masterclass with the Royal Academy of Music flute students and were honoured to have classes with Paul Edmund-Davies, Susan Milan and Michael Cox. In Paris we performed in a collaborative concert with students from the Ecole Normale and their teacher Patricia Nagle. She says in a recent e-mail, ‘My students were very impressed with your students and loved having the exchange’. In addition we had classes with Philippe Bernold and Jean Ferrandis which completed a memorable trip.

The Flute Society of SA welcomes new committee member Helen Seppelt. Helen is studying with Elizabeth Koch at the Elder Conservatorium of Music and is in her second year of the Bachelor of Music.

For the interest of flute teachers around Australia, I am intending running further study trips to London, in particular with teachers. If you wish to show an expression of interest please get in touch by e-mail.

The highlight for me for the rest of the year in Adelaide will be the forthcoming visit of Michael Cox. Please read the article about the course in this newsletter for information on the brilliant programme he will be presenting during the week of July 4-9 at the University of Adelaide.

I wish you all well and look forward to catching up at our 2011 events.

Best wishes,

Elizabeth Koch OAM

UNIVERSITY OF ADELAIDE FLUTE COURSE
Guest: MICHAEL COX
When: July 4-9
Venue: Elder Hall, Elder Conservatorium of Music
Enquiries: Elizabeth Koch, Ph. 8303-5343, e-mail: elizabeth.koch@adelaide.edu.au

Michael Cox has been a very welcome guest in Adelaide on several occasions and each time we wish for him to return as soon as possible! So the good news is that he will be here from July 4-9 this year and will present an amazing and innovative program of classes and also a recital with Leigh Harrold, on Wednesday July 6 in Elder Hall.

Fourteen performers have been chosen by audition to present chosen repertoire in a huge variety of classes during that week. The performers are from all over Australia and two Adelaide students, Anna Cooper and Helen Seppelt, have been fortunate to have been selected.

The schedule includes all aspects of flute playing and technique. The repertoire will include concerti by Ibert, Nielsen, Mozart and Chaminade, two sessions on the Poulenc Sonata, showpieces by Boehm, Borne, Martin, Hue, Tulou and Muczynski, and other repertoire including works by Martinu, Reinecke, Burton, Camus, and Vine.
Hearing this vast repertoire taught and performed will be a veritable treasure chest for any teacher or any flute student and the whole event will be a rare chance to hear this world renowned teacher and performer close up.

Michael leads an incredibly busy life as a musician, primarily being the Principal Flute of the BBC Symphony Orchestra in London, but also Principal Flute of the London Sinfonietta and St Martins in the Field. He is renowned for his passion for teaching.

I do hope that you can attend. If you wish to attend as an observer for the complete week, including the recital, the cost is $440. Daily rates are $75 for July 4, 5, 6 and 7, but this rate does not include the recital.

The recital is Adult $40, Concession $25, and Student $10.

Please e-mail Elizabeth Koch for further information, or call 0409-282-927.

The percussion section at a music college kept making mistakes during an orchestral rehearsal.

‘When you’re too stupid to play anything’, the conductor sneered, ‘they give you a couple of sticks, put you in the back and call you a percussionist’.

A music student whispered loudly, ‘And if you’re too stupid to hang on to both sticks, they put you in the front and call you a conductor’.

RECENT EVENTS: OVERSEAS STUDY TOUR TO ENGLAND AND FRANCE

by Helen Seppelt

Six students from the Elder Conservatorium were invited to participate in a study trip to London and Paris in January and February this year by their teacher, Elizabeth Koch OAM. (Liz from now on!)

Simon Channing, Head of Woodwind at the Royal College of Music, was extremely generous, allowing us to sit in on Sir James Galway’s masterclass, which was not officially on our programme. He also ran an orchestral excerpts class for us, and we were invited to sit in on a side by side session that his students were participating in with members of the London Symphony Orchestra.

We had an all-day class with Paul Edmund-Davies at his home, which was a shoe free zone, so we all went prepared with wacky socks! We went out for a meal with him, returned to his home for tea and sticky buns and I seem to recall (vaguely!) that the day was topped off with a glass of champagne.

Our first class at the College was with Susan Milan, who was amazingly knowledgeable and fun too. She sat with us at lunch and told us all about the amount of commitment and determination you need to ‘make it’, by telling us her own life story.

No trip to London would be complete without a class with Michael Cox, Professor of Flute at the Royal Academy of Music. He had just stepped off a plane from Austria, and had his suitcase parked in the College, but he performed the most amazing solo recital, just for us, with Leigh Harrold accompanying, and ran his usual energetic, passionate master class too.

In Paris we began with a class with Philippe Bernold at his home. It was great to get out of the centre of Paris and get a glimpse of French life. The potatoes he cooked for his son’s lunch have become one of my favourite dishes! We learned a huge amount about technique from him, and also from Jean Ferrandis and Patricia Nagle, our next teachers. In addition we had a physical therapy class with Coralie Cousin at the Ecole Normale Superieure. After watching us play only a couple of bars of a piece she was able to gently nudge and push our bodies into the exactly correct, extremely comfortable position. All of the French teachers we had contact with were focused on posture, embouchure flexibility and technique, yet when we watched the students at the Ecole play we observed that they all had posture problems, even though they have regular classes with these people! Just a brief contact with them has already changed the way we stand and breathe, so we were a little mystified by this.

And when we weren’t in classes? Sightseeing at the Tower of London, the Houses of Parliament and some shopping in London, followed by places like the Eiffel Tower, Moulin Rouge and more shopping in Paris … oh, and eating! Crepes stuffed with nutella, knocking on Liz’s door and invading her room with a pan of fried potatoes which we all sat round together and ate.

Anna Cooper, Eloise Doherty, Stephanie Heather, Mandy Hutchinson, Nicole Pearce and Helen Seppelt would like to thank Liz very much for the opportunity to participate in this trip. She organised the whole thing herself, which was a huge undertaking, as well as managing her ‘day job’ as Head of Performance and Head of Woodwind at the Elder Conservatorium. Then she was also brave enough to set out overseas with six students in tow, and we all just kept going non-stop for three weeks. It was a truly life changing experience, which we will never forget.♫
ARTICLE: LOOKING AFTER YOUR FLUTE from Wikibooks
(visit http://en.wikibooks.org/wiki/Flute/Flute_Maintenance)

DAILY MAINTENANCE
As you play your flute, moisture builds up inside the tube. Whilst the instrument is designed to cope with this, it is best to wipe out the instrument after each use, in order to prevent decay of pads, corrosion of the instrument, and a bad smell.

You will need several items as part of your daily cleaning kit.

CLEANING ROD
The cleaning rod, which should have been supplied with the instrument, is a long rod (approximately the length of the body of the flute), with a hole in one end. Rods are commonly made from plastic or metal, but wood is best, as it prevents scratches on the inside of the instrument. The cleaning rod is commonly kept in a special compartment inside the flute case.

CLEANING CLOTH
The cloth you use for cleaning the inside of your flute should be lint-free, soft, and quite absorbent. Some flute manufacturers provide a loose-woven gauze-style cloth. Ensure that the cloth is of a reasonable size, so that it can adequately clean the flute.

POLISHING CLOTH
This is a soft lint-free cloth that is used exclusively for gently removing fingerprints from the surface of the instrument after use. Do not use a designated "silver polishing cloth", as the chemicals in these cloths will damage the surface of the instrument.

ROUTINE
When you have finished playing the instrument, disassemble it, placing each piece carefully into the case. Take your cleaning rod and your cleaning cloth, and insert one corner of the cloth into the hole in the rod, and pull through approximately 2-3 inches. Begin twisting the rod so that the cloth winds around, covering the entire length of the rod. Gently push the cloth-covered rod through each segment of the flute, checking to see if all moisture has been removed. If you have difficulty removing the moisture from the headjoint, experiment with wrapping a small amount of the cloth around the bare end of the stick before inserting it. You may need to wrap the cloth more tightly in order to swab the flute completely, and conversely, you may find that the cloth is simply too bulky to fit into the flute. If this is the case, try wrapping it thinly, or perhaps using a smaller cloth. Do not force the cloth into the flute - this can be costly to repair if it becomes lodged. This procedure should be performed after each use of the flute, before the instrument has had a chance to dry out. Once the inside of the flute is dry, take your polishing cloth, and gently remove all marks from the surface of the instrument. Place all pieces back into the case, and close the lid, ensuring the instrument is positioned correctly. Cleaning cloths should be stored somewhere other than inside the flute case, as this can squash the keys and cause unnecessary stress. Consider tying them around the handle of your case, or folding them neatly and keeping them in a case pocket.

Cleaning Rod
CD REVIEW
by Robert Brown

The Fisenden Flute Ensemble was formed in 2007 by Neil Fisenden in memory of his father, the distinguished flautist Owen Fisenden. The ensemble brings together ten professional flautists and teachers from Perth to explore the timbres and textures of the flute family, ranging from piccolo to contrabass flute. The Fisenden Flute Ensemble performed at the National Flute Association’s 37th Annual Convention in New York in August 2009, and the Australian Flute Festival in Adelaide in October 2009.

Iain Grandage’s Telegraphed was commissioned for the performance in New York (YouTube at http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZaJSt7VwDTA&feature=related). The north-south telegraph line (completed in 1872) that once stretched across Australia to connect it with the Old World inspired its composition. The composer writes about the ‘disparity between the silence … through which the telegraph line travelled and the … constantly flowing information that it would have once carried’. The composer effectively captures these contrasts in the music. The use of whirlies, played by two of the ensemble members, add some interesting sonorities.

Michal Rosiak, an Adelaide resident from 2006-2009, has provided two compositions for this CD, Scherzo (YouTube at http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3TEHfolew90) and Valse Giocoso, and Perth-based composer Michael Le Page’s Fantasy for Flute Ensemble is also a welcome addition to the repertoire.

The Fisenden Flute Ensemble plays with precision and enthusiasm under Neil Fisenden’s baton, brilliantly capturing the nuances and colours conceived by the composers. Do order a copy of Telegraphed; this is flute ensemble playing at its best.
